King George III

The Revolutionary War was fought for the freedom of the colonies from Great Britain and _____. Women played an important role during the American Revolution. Although most stayed home to care for their families, there were some women more involved in the war efforts. During the Revolution, women took on the roles of _____, spies, and soldiers. Nurses took care of the sick and the injured. Diseases spread rapidly, especially during the winters, so being a nurse was a _____ job. Some women were spies for the _____ Army. Many generals and leaders would speak openly in front of women because they did not believe it mattered. There were even women who fought as soldiers. Although this wasn't allowed, they dressed up as men with _____ names and fought alongside them.

9 CHALLENGES

6 PASSAGES

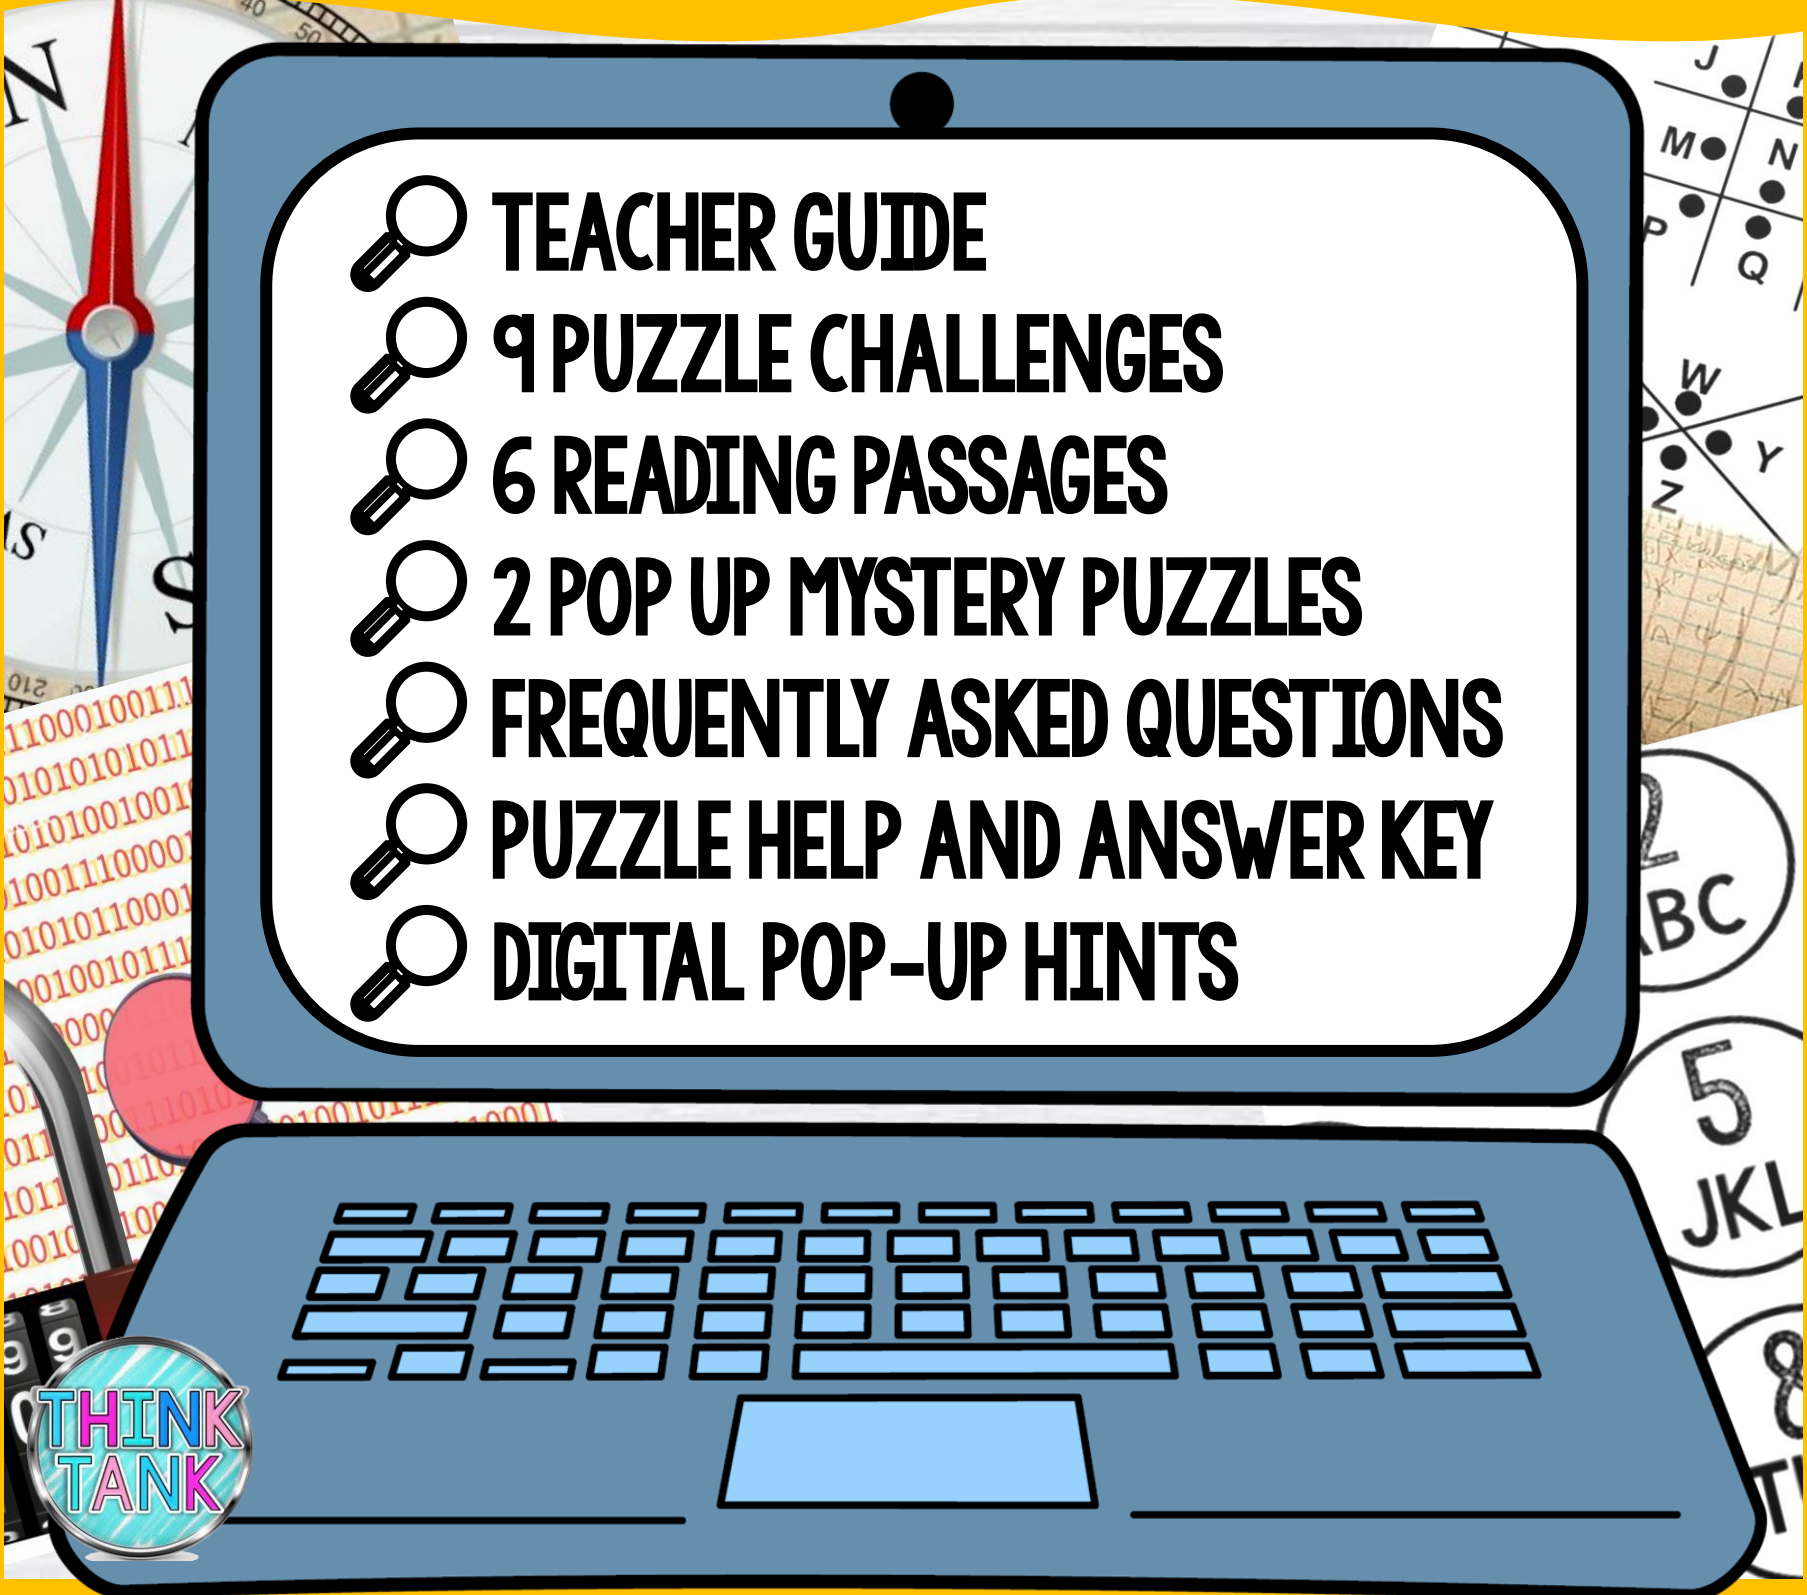

Students will read 6 short passages about the topic, then answer questions.

Martha Washington was the wife of the Continental Army's Commander-in-Chief, George Washington. She continuously supported her husband and the army and even joined them at Valley Forge during one of the harshest winters the army faced. Even with the lack of food, supplies, and the rapid spread of disease, Martha left the comfort of her home at Mount Vernon to deliver food and socks to the troops. While there she cheered up troops, arranged social events, and nursed sick soldiers. Martha helped Patriots raise money to help pay for uniforms and food for the soldiers. When her husband was injured, Molly Pitcher of New Jersey took his place at the cannon during the Battle of Monmouth. Her birthname was Mary McCaully but she earned the nickname of Molly Pitcher by delivering water to troops on the battlefield.
