6 PASSAGES

Thomas Alva Edison is known to be one of the greatest American inventors credited with over 1,000 inventions. He is most known for improving the practical lightbulb that is used today and the system that generates power to it. Many of his inventions greatly influenced how people live their life around the world.

Thomas Edison was born in Ohio on February 11, 1847. Edison did not learn to talk until he was almost 4 years old. His parents were Samuel and Nancy Edison. From an early age, Edison showed an interest in science and technology. He was a curious child who loved to experiment and tinker with machines and gadgets. At the age of 12, he lost most of his hearing after getting scarlet fever. He began school late but did not do well, possibly due to the fact that he could not hear. Instead, his mother, a former teacher, pulled him out and homeschooled him.
